Please note:

BEIJING, Dec. 16 (Xinhua) - China Development Bank Corp. (CDB) was officially launched here on 16 December, as the policy bank transforms itself into a commercial organization. As one of the three major policy banks, CDB's move was a major step in China's financial reform. With a registered capital of 300 billion yuan (44.12 billion US dollars), the new corporation inherited all the assets, liabilities and business of the original bank, which was set up in 1994 to organize financing for infrastructure projects and major industrial development. Central Huijin injected 20 million US dollars in December 2007 to facilitate the reform of the bank. The reform schedule got approval from the cabinet, the State Council, in February this year. The Ministry of Finance and Central Huijin are CDB's two shareholders, holding 51.3 per cent and 48.7 per cent stakes, respectively. At the end of 2007, CDB had 320 billion yuan of net assets and 2.89 trillion total assets. It had 2.26 trillion yuan in loans, of which less than 1 per cent were non-performing. As a policy bank, CDB used to raise money mainly by issuing state-backed bonds to other financial institutions. But after the bank goes commercial, these bonds will be less attractive as they will no longer have a credit rating equal to government bonds. This change will make it more difficult and expensive for the bank to raise money, said analysts. "Our bank is actively contacting investment banks and other general partners and limited partners, in an effort to make further innovations in our marketing and commercial operations," CDB official Xiao Yanzong said. The country's three leading steel mills agreed on 30 December to merge into one entity via share swaps which will create the country's largest listed steelmaker and further speed industry consolidation. China, the world's largest producer and consumer of steel, is urging its steelmakers to combine forces to increase global competitiveness and improve outmoded facilities, which will help cut pollution and energy consumption. Hebei Iron and Steel Group began merging its three listed units on 30 December to form the country's second-largest listed steelmaker and improve profitability in the face of a slumping industry. Shenzhen-listed Tangshan Iron & Steel, of which Hebei Steel owns 53.88 per cent, said it would swap shares to merge with its Shanghai-listed sister companies, Handan Iron & Steel and Chengde Xinxin Vanadium and Titanium, in both of which Hebei Steel is also the largest shareholder. Tangshan Steel, Handan Steel and Chengde Xinxin are based in Hebei province, home to 20 per cent of the country's steel production capacity. The merger plan needs approval by minority shareholders and securities watchdogs. After the merger, Tangshan Steel will remain as the only listed arm of Hebei Steel, while the other two firms will be delisted. Hebei Steel's shareholding in the expanded Tangshan Steel will be reduced to 46.83 per cent. The combined company was the second-largest listed steelmaker, based on its crude steel output of 20.86 million tonnes last year, just behind Shanghai-listed Baoshan Iron and Steel with 22.6 million tonnes. Liu Shaoyong (刘绍勇)

Appointed president of China Eastern Air Holding Co. (<http://www.fliiegerweb.com/airliner/news/artikel.php?show=news-24> 09, accessed 6 Jan 09) He succeeds Li Fenghua.

The chairman and president of China Eastern Airlines (CEA), one of several major state-owned carriers, have been replaced as part of a government-managed shake-up of the troubled industry. Liu Shaoyong, chairman of rival China Southern Airlines, was appointed to replace Shanghai-based China Eastern's chairman Li Fenghua, the carrier said in a statement to the Hong Kong Stock Exchange.

Ma Xulun, vice president of China National Aviation Holding Co. - the state-owned parent of flag-carrier Air China - was named president of China Eastern, replacing Cao Jianxiong, it said.

In a separate announcement, China Southern said Liu Shaoyong had resigned as chairman. It appointed another company director, Li Wenxin, to be acting chairman until Liu's replacement is named.

In an effort to boost Shanghai's status as an international aviation hub, the State-owned Assets Supervision and Administration Commission of the State Council, CEA's controlling shareholder, reached agreement with the State-owned Assets Supervision and Administration Commission of the Shanghai Municipal Government, SAL's controlling shareholder, on the merger of the two Shanghai-based airlines, an industry insider told ATWOnline. Key details on how the combination will move forward remain undecided, but Liu Shaoyong is expected to be chairman of the merged carrier. The government's plan to revive CEA includes a change in leadership in advance of any consolidation.

"We regard the change as positive," said a Citigroup report. "The management reshuffle may help to fix the open hostility between Air China and China Eastern since the Singapore Airlines-Air China bidding war for a China Eastern stake last year, and could unveil essential reforms including consolidation among the Big Three." The ousted Li Fenghua was known for his determination to push for collaboration between SIA and China Eastern and fend off the advances of Air China. Individual shareholders of China Eastern vetoed a stake sale to SIA in January in light of a potentially higher bid offered by Air China's parent. In return, China Eastern's management turned down the proposal by Air China.

BEIJING, Dec. 31 (Xinhua) - China announced that it has appointed a new work safety regulator after the position was vacant for more than a month, following a deadly mine accident in north China. Luo Lin, 53, former deputy secretary of the CCP Liaoning Provincial Committee, became director and Party chief of the State Administration of Work Safety, the agency's website said. Luo's name is on a leadership list posted on the site, which also publishes his resume. Luo obtained a master's degree in economics. He was born in Liaoning and held Party positions in several cities of the northeastern province. Wang Jun, Luo's predecessor, was appointed as acting governor of the northern coal-rich Shanxi Province in mid-September, when the former governor Meng Xuenong resigned after a massive landslide triggered by the collapse of an illegal mining dump killed at least 277. As of Dec. 28, there were 31 major accidents in coal mines, with 503 dead or missing, 120 more than the same period last year, according to the administration. (XNA, 31 Dec 08; SCMP, 1 Jan 09)

Decision of the NPC Standing Committee on Amending the "Patent Law of the People's Republic of China", adopted at the Sixth Meeting of the Standing Committee of the 11th National People's Congress on 27 December. (Presidential Decree No 8 signed by State President Hu Jintao on 27 December 2008) (Full text of the decision: RMRB, 28 Dec 08)

BEIJING, Dec. 27 (Xinhua) - China's top legislature approved the revision of the Patent Law to allow inventors to apply for foreign patents before domestic ones for their inventions. The revised law, which takes effect on Oct. 1, 2009, was adopted with 154 votes and four abstentions at the closing meeting of the sixth session of the 11th National People's Congress (NPC) Standing Committee. The change is aimed at encouraging innovation and improving China's "international competitiveness", Chen Guangjun, a senior official with the NPC's Education, Science, Culture and Health Committee, said at a press conference after the legislative session. Previously, the Patent Law stipulated that people, whose inventions were completed in China, must apply for domestic patents first before applying for a foreign one. The new amendment also says Chinese inventors must first go through government scrutiny before applying for foreign patents to find out if such innovations should be made national secrets. Inventions which have not undergone security checks will not be granted Chinese patents, according to the law. The amendment applies to all inventions completed in China. The Patent Law, which was enacted 1985, has had two major revisions in the past. (XNA, 27 Dec 08)

Social Insurance Law of the People's Republic of China (draft). The draft law consists of 12 chapters with 91 articles. (Full text: RMRB, 29 Dec 08)

BEIJING, Dec. 1 (Xinhua) - New regulations took effect in China on 1 December that require more openness in public hearings, and greater access to information for consumers and the media, when changes are proposed for government-set prices.

The amendment to the regulation on hearings for government pricing was issued by the National Development and Reform Commission, the top economic planning agency, on Oct. 22 following public consultations in July. One provision of the new regulations states that price hikes for public utilities and "natural monopolies" will not be valid without hearings. Also, the results of hearings and final decisions must be communicated to the public via official websites and the media. (XNA, 1 Dec 08)

Beijing, Dec. 3 (Xinhua) - New rules outlining how a civil servant can be sacked have drawn criticism from the public, along with praise for a reform that is much needed in China's political system. China's state bureau of civil servants on 2 December, stipulated that civil servants, who were evaluated as "incompetent" for two consecutive years in the annual assessment, would be dismissed. The bureau said those "whose ideological and political quality is relatively bad, whose working ability cannot meet the requirement of their jobs, whose dereliction of duty caused serious losses and had a bad social impact, or who behaved without a sense of responsibility to their work" were "incompetent". A netizen from Shanghai hailed the regulations. "Great! The posts of civil servants are no longer 'iron bowls' (food, housing and welfare provisions). Those who failed to do their jobs should get out as soon as possible," read the post. However, many of the others were not so optimistic. "It's difficult to say whether the regulations would be well implemented as there is no efficient supervision system and independent third party evaluation," wrote another post. The direct superior officials of each civil servant are in charge of giving advice on the evaluation, which will be finally decided by the officials in charge of the whole department or an assessment committee. Zhu Lijia, professor of the National School of Administration, said it's the first time that China has drawn up detailed regulations on the assessment of civil servants after the country's law on civil servant took effect on Jan. 1, 2006. However, he criticized the standards, saying they should be made more practical and impersonal. "Or it would all depend on the officials' will," he said. ... A total of 775,000 people took a nationwide exam in 38 cities of China to qualify for 13,500 posts as national civil servants on Sunday. (XNA, 3 Dec 08)

BEIJING, Dec. 5 (Xinhua) - Chinese drivers will no longer have to pay road maintenance fees as the New Year begins but have to pay a hiked gasoline tax. But when they drive to gas station, they will find they don't have to dig deeper into their pockets.

That's what the government promised in a draft scheme on fuel taxation and reform of the country's refined oil pricing mechanism, released on 5 December solicit public opinion. The scheme, scheduled to be put into effect on Jan. 1, 2009, will annul six types of fees on road and waterway maintenance and management. Meantime, it will raise the gasoline tax from the current 0.2 yuan per litre to one yuan and diesel tax from 0.1 yuan per litre to 0.8 yuan. The country's existing fuel prices will not be further raised because of the reform, said the draft scheme jointly released by the National Development and Reform Commission, Ministry of Finance, Ministry of Transport and State Administration of Taxation. The four ministries said the reform on fuel taxation and oil pricing "is aimed at facilitating energy saving and emission cut as well as the economic structural adjustment." Other guidelines of the reform included regulating toll collection and raising funds to build and maintain infrastructure, said the draft.

The draft document said China's onshore crude oil prices should be directly in line with prices on the international market. Refined oil prices, however, should be indirectly linked to global oil prices. Under the new system, "pricing of domestic refined oil prices should not only reflect fluctuations of international oil prices and production cost, but also take into account domestic oil supply and demand," it said. In the retail sector, the draft also said fuel would be sold at set ceiling prices, which would be based on producer prices. The government will retain "an appropriate control" over the fuel price. China has been pushing for fuel tax reform for many years. Both government officials and scholars have been saying that the oil price plunge on the international market is presenting a perfect opportunity for China kick start it. The world crude oil price has plunged almost 70 per cent from the peak 147 US dollars per barrel in mid-July. Even with oil prices tumbled to below 50 dollars a barrel, Chinese drivers are paying much more than those in many other countries because domestic fuel price has been unchanged since June. The government said that the tax revenues would be used to cover expenditure on road and waterway maintenance and management, subsidize the losses of local governments due to the abolishment of road tolls and support farmers and disadvantaged people affected by the reform. The public may raise their opinions by letter, fax or email from Dec. 5 to Dec. 12, said the four ministries in a press release. The State Council, or the Cabinet, had discussed the reform plans of oil pricing mechanism last week, and decided to make public the draft reform plan to solicit public advice. (XNA, 5 Dec 08)
