Please note:

The State Council has set up the Leading Group for the Construction of the Beijing-Shanghai High-Speed Railway, Xinhua reported on 30 October. Vice-Premier Zeng Peiyan heads the taskforce. Ma Kai, chairman of the National Development and Reform Commission, Liu Zhijun, minister of railways, and Zhang Ping, deputy secretary-general of the State Council, were appointed deputy heads. The State Council approved a feasibility study of the high-speed rail link last month. With an estimated budget of about 220 billion RMBY, the railway will stretch 1,318km, passing through 21 possible stops in Tianjin and cities in the provinces of Hebei, Shandong, Anhui and Jiangsu (http://news.xinhuanet.com/newscenter/2007-10/30/content_6973946.htm, accessed 1 Nov 07; SCMP, 1 Nov 07)

BEIJING, Nov. 27 (Xinhua) - Chinese Vice-Premier Wu Yi said on 27 November that the country should step up efforts to develop its service trade in a bid to alter the growth pattern of foreign trade and increase employment and domestic consumption. "The Chinese government attaches great importance to developing the service trade," said Wu, adding that "since its entry into WTO, China has opened its service industry wider and wider, with its service trade expanding rapidly." Last year, China's service trade reached 191.75 billion US dollars, compared with 4.6 billion US dollars in 1982. Meanwhile, its world ranking rose from the 28th place to the eighth in service exports and from the 40th to seventh in imports. But compared with developed countries, the overall development level of China's service industry and trade remains low, said Wu. She made the remarks in a congratulatory letter to a newly established national association of service trade. China will put the development of its service trade high on the agenda, said Vice-Minister of Commerce Yi Xiaozhun. The country will mainly boost trade in the cultural, tourism, shipping and insurance sectors and strengthen the international competitiveness of service firms, Yi said. The government will map out new policies to give strong support to firms that develop service trade and encourage these firms to cooperate and learn from their foreign counterparts. To promote service trade, China will also strengthen its exchanges and cooperation with international organizations, such as the WTO, the UN Conference on Trade and Development and the European Union. France (Nov 26)

BEIJING, Nov. 26 (Xinhua) - China has signed an agreement worth 17.4 billion US dollars, during French President Nicolas Sarkozy's visit to Beijing, to buy 160 planes from French company Airbus.

The deal, inked in Beijing, is composed of 110 A320 planes and 50 A330 planes, according to Airbus China.

The China Aviation Supplies Import and Export Group Corporation (CASGC) has signed an agreement to buy 150 Airbus planes, and China Southern Airlines, the country's largest carrier by fleet size, has ordered 10 A330-220s, the company said. China Southern's purchase was announced by the carrier in October.

The 150-aircraft deal sealed with the CASGC, a key state-owned service provider of civil aviation products, was a huge contract compared with previous purchases made by individual carriers.

China's national flag carrier Air China said earlier it intended to buy 24 Airbus 320 family aircraft with the revenue gained from selling 400 million A-shares.

The 500th A330 aircraft made by Airbus was delivered to Hainan Airlines on Nov. 15.

Airbus also said it had signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) with China's top economic planner to allow the Chinese aviation industry to participate in the company's manufacture of its new extra wide-body A350.

"Airbus confirms its intention to manufacture five per cent of the airframe of the A350 XWB aircraft in China," the company said in a statement.

The MOU was signed by both sides in the presence of Chinese President Hu Jintao and visiting French President Nicolas Sarkozy.

"Airbus will actively involve Chinese enterprises in the A350 XWB project to develop the current cooperation and prepare for further possible cooperation for future programmes," said the company.

"The NDRC encourages the efforts to further enhance industrial cooperation between the Chinese aviation industry and Airbus," said Zhang Xiaoqiang, vice minister of the National Development and Reform Commission (NDRC).

China will continue to be the world's biggest purchaser of aircraft and engines over the next 20 years, according to a report released by the British engine manufacturer Rolls-Royce in September.

The Rolls-Royce report predicted that Chinese airlines would buy more than 3,100 new planes over the next two decades.

China has been ordering aircraft from both Airbus and the US-based Boeing, which take a lion's share of the international market, and both companies see China as an important client for its fast growing market.

"China will strengthen international communication and cooperation, sharing experiences and techniques of health care-infection control with other countries," he said.

China has paid great attention to the health care-infection control, which was covered by the Law on the Prevention and Treatment of Infectious Diseases enacted in 2004 and the ministry's regulations on hospital infections management in 2006, Huang said.

Dr Hans Troedsson, the WHO Representative in China, said one fifth of the world population joined the programme as it was launched in China, and it's significant to conduct activities through proper approaches.

According to statistics, some 1.4 million patients get infected in hospitals and the rate of health care-infections is about five per cent in China. The infections may make the patients' state of illness worse, prolong the time for them in hospital, and even lead to their deaths.

The First Global Patient Safety Challenge, "Clean Care Is Safer Care", was inaugurated as a flagship programme of the World Alliance for Patient Safety of the WHO in 2004. Besides China, 45 countries and regions have signed commitments to join the programme. (XNA, 27 Nov 07)

Geneva, Nov. 28 (Xinhua) - China notified the World Trade Organization (WTO) on 28 November that it had ratified the Protocol Amending the Agreement on Trade-Related Aspects of Intellectual Property Rights (TRIPS).

Chinese Ambassador Sun Zhenyu sent a notification letter to WTO Director-General Pascal Lamy together with the instrument of ratification signed by President Hu Jintao and Foreign Minister Yang Jiechi, said the Chinese mission to the WTO.

The Protocol Amending the TRIPS Agreement, done at Geneva on Dec. 6 2005, means to allow WTO members to export patented medicines to third countries with no manufacturing capacity in the pharmaceutical sector, by making use of compulsory licenses.

"China believes that this amendment of the TRIPS Agreement is part of the wider national and international actions to address the public health problems afflicting many developing countries, particularly the least-developed countries," the Chinese mission said in a statement.

"In ratifying the protocol, China has showed its consistent commitment to the WTO's development objective and its support for developing members' legitimate right to protect public health and gain improved access to medicines," the statement said.

The protocol will only enter into force once two thirds of the WTO's 151 members have accepted it. China is the 13th WTO member to have accepted it. (XNA, 28 Nov 07)

Regulations for National Survey of Pollution Sources. The regulations will come into effect on the date of promulgation. (Decree No. 508 of the PRC State Council, signed by Wen Jiabao, Premier of the State Council, on 9 October 2007) (Full text: RMRB, 16 Oct 07)

Beijing 15 Oct (Xinhua) - The 7-chapter, 42-article statute includes the preamble; the target, scope, content, and measures of the survey to identify pollutants, data handling, and quality control; data release as well as management, development, and application of information; citation and punishment; and an appendix.

The purpose of the promulgation of the regulations is to scientifically and effectively organize a national survey of pollution sources and ensure the accuracy and timeliness of the pollution data. The PRC Statistics Law and the PRC Environment Protection Law are the basis for the drafting of the regulations.

The regulations stipulate that the task of the survey of pollution sources is to identify the quantity of all sorts of pollution sources and their distribution in trades and regions; understand the outcome, release, and handling of the main pollution sources; establish and improve the archive for main pollution sources, the data bank for pollution sources, and the platform for environment statistics; and provide grounds for the drafting of the policies and planning for environment protection and economic and social development.

The pollution sources cited in the regulations refer to the venues, facilities, and devices that have produced an adverse impact on the environment or have discharged pollution on the environment in the course of production, livelihood, and other activities as well as other pollution sources.

The regulations stipulate that a national survey will be conducted every 10 years on 31 December of the survey year.

The regulations will come into effect on the date of promulgation. (Xinhua, 15 Oct 07, in BBC PF, 19 Nov 07)

Beijing, Oct. 31 (Xinhua) - In the wake of headline food scandals, China's cabinet approved in principle a draft law on food safety to address the "weak points" in food production, processing, delivery, storage and sales.

"Food safety is vital to improving people's lives and health, so relevant legislation must match national efforts of safeguarding food safety," said Chinese Premier Wen Jiabao.

The draft law, based on the existing Food Hygiene Law, was discussed at the executive meeting of the State Council, which was presided over by Wen.

The draft law proposed a food safety risk supervision and evaluation mechanism to provide a "key basis" for constituting food safety standards and food born disease control measures. The mechanism demanded a "unified, timely, objective and accurate" disclosure of emergency information.

Related institutional systems covering food production, processing, delivery, storage and sales should be set up to prevent food safety problems, according to the premier.

The government would standardize practices such as food production licensing, inspection and quarantine results recording, product labelling and recalling, said the premier, adding the producer would bear major responsibilities for food safety scandals and be punished more severely.

The draft law says imported food and additives must meet China's national food safety standards while food products exported from China to other countries and regions should satisfy the compulsory requirements set by importers and pass local entry inspection and quarantine.

Local governments have legal obligations to supervise food safety and build fast and convenient aid channels to protect consumers' rights, said the premier.

The draft law will be submitted to the National People's Congress, the country's legislature, for debate and adoption.

World Health Organization (WHO) chief Margaret Chan on Wednesday expressed appreciation on China's efforts to crack down on food safety problems.

Chan told Li Changjiang, head of the China's product quality watchdog, that she was "very impressed" with an ongoing nationwide product safety inspection campaign launched in August.

"Food safety is a serious matter not only for the WHO, but for the world as a whole," said Chan, who is in China for an international health forum.

The campaign she mentioned was a four-month overhaul described by Chinese vice premier Wu Yi as a "special battle" to ensure product quality and food safety. It had seen 667 tons of substandard and fake food products destroyed and 446 tons removed from marketplaces by October 8.

The Chinese government has taken a highly responsible attitude towards food safety and strengthened international cooperation in this regard, the State Council heard.

Last week Wu ordered the advancement of a crackdown on products in distribution as well as in production. A total of 626 criminal cases involving the production or sales of substandard food, drugs and farm produce had been filed during the campaign, with 774 suspects brought under control, according to the vice premier.

China and the Association of Southeast Asian Nations (ASEAN) on 29 October issued a joint statement, vowing to strengthen cooperation in food safety, promote food trade and protect consumers' rights and benefits. (XNA, 31 Oct 07)

Beijing, Nov. 2 (Xinhua) - China has made a substantial move to advance the development of automobiles powered by new energies amidst concerns on energy conservation and environmental protection.

A new regulation regarding the qualifications of manufacturers for automobiles powered by new energies was promulgated on 1 November by the country's top economic planner, the National Development and Reform Commission (NDRC), after seven months of public discussion.

New-energy automobiles were defined by the regulation as hybrid cars, battery electric vehicles (BEV), fuel cell electric vehicles (FCEV), hydrogen-fuelled vehicles and vehicles powered by other new types of fuel.

Professor Zha Daojiong, director of the Centre for International Energy Security at Renmin University of China in Beijing, told Xinhua the regulation came out against a background of increasing domestic and international energy demands.

The promulgation of the regulation coincided with the announcement of a sharp gasoline price hike by the NDRC. The prices of gasoline, diesel oil and aviation kerosene increased by 500 yuan per ton, a rise of almost 10 per cent, to lessen the gap between soaring international crude prices and state-set domestic oil prices.

The document said China would accelerate the research, development and production of new energy vehicles step by step. Auto enterprises applying to manufacture vehicles powered by new energies should have adequate research, production and after-sale service capacities and need to ensure the reliability of the autos, it said.

"Enterprises wanting to manufacture new-energy cars should pay attention that their development of new type of energies should be truly 'energy-efficient' rather than only 'new in name,'" Zha said. "It is also crucial to avoid creating new sources of pollution in the process of the production of vehicles fuelled by new energies."

Special testing institutions will be entrusted to supervise the quality of the vehicles powered by new energies, according to the regulation. (XNA, 2 Nov 07)

Beijing, Nov. 7 (Xinhua) - China's government released a new guide of industries open to foreign investment and foreign companies that are banned or restricted from entering the Chinese market.

Foreign investors are invited to join efforts to promote the recycling economy, clean production, renewable energy utilization and ecological environment protection.

However, China is to prohibit foreign investors from exploiting "important and non-renewable" mineral resources, and to restrict energy-consuming and highly-polluting projects, said the NDRC.

The new guide, promulgated against the backdrop of economic transformation from quantity to quality, will replace the 2004 version and take effect from Dec. 1, said the National Development and Reform Centre (NDRC), or the top economic planner.

The 28-page guide, stating China's position of "upholding the opening-up policy and safeguarding national economic security", has just been approved by the State Council.

Foreign companies are restricted from entering "strategic and sensitive" industries relating to the national economic security, but the NDRC did not specify these industries or the restrictions.

Foreign capital is encouraged to help develop service outsourcing and modern logistics, the guide says.

The manufacturing sector is also open to foreign investment in high technology, equipment manufacturing and new materials industries, but foreign investment in traditional manufacturing industries in which China already had "mature technologies and relatively strong production capacity" is not encouraged.

The government will also curb the expansion of export-oriented industries to reduce ballooning trade surplus, which has stirred protectionist sentiment among major trade partners.

Since 1997, China has revised the industry guide for foreign investors on three occasions in the hope of channelling foreign investment to serve the needs of industrial restructuring.

Justin Lin, director of the China Centre for Economic Research of Peking University, said it was time China started to be more discerning with foreign investment.

The current policies to attract foreign investment were made 28 years ago when China was desperate for money and foreign currencies.

"Our priority now is not to attract as much foreign investment as possible, but to bring in new high-tech industries that we currently don't have," Lin said, "I have no doubt that preferential policies will only remain for certain kinds of foreign investors."

Jin Bosheng, a research analyst with the Ministry of Commerce, said the government was showing particular interest in new high-tech industries, especially electronics, biology, petrochemicals and medicines, which indicated it was seeking to redirect foreign investment.

Amid growing domestic concern that surging foreign trade was failing to benefit people in central and western China, investment regulators are focusing on upgrading industries in the poorer areas of inland China.

The government would also introduce a revised version of the guide for foreign investors in central and western regions, said the NDRC. China is the largest recipient of foreign investment of all developing nations for 15 successive years. But a 2004 report to the UN Conference on Trade and Development noted China attracted per capita foreign investment of 47 US dollars, much lower than the 534 US dollars per person that was invested in developed countries and below the world average of 107 US dollars. (XNA, 7 Nov 07)

Beijing, Nov. 13 (Xinhua) - Chinese fire-fighting officials and their spouse and children are banned from running companies related to fire-fighting facilities and fire protection materials, according to a new regulation issued on 12 November.

They are also prohibited from providing fire protection services, said the regulation issued by the Fire Bureau under the Ministry of Public Security (MPS) to combat corruption among fire-fighting forces.

It prohibited officials from taking advantage of their posts for illegal profit in fire prevention inspection and approvals for construction projects, fire accident investigations and supervision of fire-fighting facilities.

They are also forbidden from taking bribes in construction projects related to the force, material purchasing, in the appointment and removal of officials, personnel transfer and promotion, and new member recruitment, the regulation noted.

Those who violate the regulation will be seriously punished in accordance with the law and expelled from the force, it said. (XNA, 13 Nov 07)
