Han Qide (韩启德)

BEIJING, Dec. 13 (Xinhua) -- Han Qide was re-elected chairman of the Central Committee of the Jiu San (September 3) Society, one of China's eight democratic parties, here on 13 December 2007.

The 9th National Congress of the Jiu San Society, which concluded in Beijing on 13 December, elected its 12th Central Committee composed of 225 members.

In addition to Han's re-election, Chen Kangfu, Feng Pei'en, He Keng, Wang Zhizhen, Shao Hong, Xie Xiaojun, Zhang Taolin, Lai Mingang Ma Dalong were elected vice chairpersons.

Han stressed all the members of the Jiu San Society should adhere to the belief of pursuing the political party system with Chinese characteristics and make efforts in improving multi-party cooperation and political consultation under the leadership of the Communist Party of China.

"The Jiu San Society will use the scientific outlook on development to guide its work and make development as the top priority while participating in and deliberating on state affairs," he said.

The Jiu San Society now has more than 105,000 members, mainly senior and leading intellectuals in the fields of science and technology.

"The society has made many suggestions that were valued and adopted by the central government," Han said.

"To help more university graduates find jobs, our society suggested encouraging more graduates to work in grass-roots schools and public institutions. To combat SARS, the society suggested establishing a transparent epidemic-reporting system," he said.

Han stressed that most suggestions were made after thorough debate among society members, stressing "in such a democratic way, our final editions of suggestions are always much better than the first ones."

Han was born in east China's Zhejiang Province in 1945 and joined the Jiu San Society in 1995. He graduated from Shanghai No.1 Medical College in 1968 and then worked for 10 years in several clinics in northwest China's Shaanxi Province.

From 1979 to 1982, he furthered his studies at the Xi'an Medical College and got his master's degree. He was a visiting scholar in the United States in the 1980s and was elected an academician of the Chinese Academy of Sciences in 1997. Han is now vice-chairman of the Standing Committee of the National People's Congress. In May 2006 he was elected president of the Chinese Association for Science and Technology.

The congress urged all Jiu San Society members to study and implement the essence of the 17th National Congress of the Communist Party of China.

The congress also examined a work report by the society's 11th central committee and approved a draft amendment to the society's constitution.

At the end of 1944, a number of progressive scholars organized the Forum on Democracy and Science to strive for victory in the Anti-Japanese War and political democracy. The forum aimed also at developing the anti-imperialist and patriotic spirit of the May 4 Movement of 1919.

In commemoration of victory in the Chinese People's War of Resistance Against Japanese Aggression and in the world anti-fascist war on Sept. 3, 1945, it adopted the name Jiu San Society, meaning Sept. 3 in Chinese. On May 4, 1946, the society was formally founded in Chongqing.

China's quality watchdog chief Li Changjiang and US Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) administrator Stephen L. Johnson signed a memorandum of understanding (MOU) at the Third China-US Strategic Economic Dialogue (SED), which began on Wednesday and will run through Thursday. Joint efforts will be made to regulate the import and export products between the United States and China, such as monitoring wastes and recycling materials, guarantee the security of chemicals, and check pesticide residues, according to the MOU between China's General Administration of Quality, Supervision, Inspection and Quarantine (AQSIQ) and the US EPA.

Joint activities should also be carried out, such as testing programme development, cooperative research and information sharing, and training, according to sources close to the senior officials. The MOU is effective for five years and may be extended with mutual agreement.

AQSIQ officials said the MOU would help build mutual contacts and form effective mechanisms to resolve problems and promote the healthy development of mutual trade. (XNA, 13 Dec 07)

International Agreements

BEIJING, Nov. 30 (Xinhua) - China's legislature signed a cooperation programme with the UNDP to "strengthen a harmonious legal environment for a successful coordinated response to HIV/AIDS in China".

The programme, described as "flagship", was signed by the Education, Science, Culture and Public Health Commission of the National People's Congress (NPC), the China International Centre for Economic and Technical Exchanges, and the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP).

Li Honggui, a member of the NPC Commission, said the programme would help build an enabling legal and policy environment in China to combat AIDS and enhance the policy implementation at all levels, which was "significant in the overall AIDS response in China".

Subinay Nandy, UNDP China Country Director, said the three-year programme aims to beef up the cross-sector leadership capacity of 500 local legislators from five provinces - northwestern Gansu and Qinghai, southeastern Zhejiang, eastern Shandong and northern Hebei - to create a favourable AIDS legislation basis.

The programme, costing a total budget of 1 million US dollars split equally between the UNDP and Chinese government, will "review and provide recommendations on AIDS laws and regulations at national level and assist strengthening provincial legislation", Nandy said.

"At the national level, China has done an excellent job in developing policies and legislation to support its efforts to respond to AIDS. However, more work remains to translate into effective and timely local level action," he said.

Nandy said he was "proud of China's efforts" made in the field of policy-making and legislation to prevent AIDS discrimination, such as the regulation on AIDS prevention and treatment, promulgated by the State council last year, and the national action plan (2006-2010) for AIDS containment, prevention and care.

Bernhard Schwartlander, UNAIDS Country Coordinator, told reporters that China needs to take the response to HIV to provincial, county and community levels and "translate policies into action".

Fighting HIV concerns "leadership" which was in line with the theme of this year's World AIDS Day that calls for "leadership", Schwartlander said.

By the end of October 2007, a total of 223,501 people had been officially reported to have contracted HIV, including 62,838 AIDS patients, according to an appraisal report by the Ministry of Health, the World Health Organization (WHO) and UNAIDS.

Though the rate of AIDS growth has slowed down, the government has admitted the situation remains grave in the country with a population of 1.3 billion. Official reports say there are estimated to be as many as 700,000 people living with HIV/AIDS in China. (XNA, 30 Nov 07)

BEIJING, Dec. 6 (Xinhua) - China is set to quintuple tax on the use of arable land for non-farming purposes and charge foreign invested companies as much as their domestic peers in a bid to protect farm land and better control land supply, according to an ordinance released by the State Council on 6 December.

Signed by Premier Wen Jiabao, the instrument took effect as of Dec. 1 and replaced the 1987 edition which had allowed foreign-invested companies to be exempt from the land use tax.

Sources with the State Administration of Taxation said that the toughened requirements would give taxation a bigger leverage in protecting the country's land for cultivation, which had shrunk 4.6m mu from the end of last year to 1.827bn mu, only slightly higher than the danger mark of 1.8bn mu (120m hectares) set by the government to feed its people.

The government has been using land as a crucial macro-economic control measure on top of fiscal and monetary measures to prevent the excessive growth in fixed-assets investment and the sprawling of urbanization.

In the early days of China's economic reforms, local governments were obsessed with attracting foreign investment with cheaper or even free land. As factories and high-rises sprang up while cities and townships sprawled fast, farmers who were not properly compensated for the farmland they lost were outraged.

Under the ordinance, in places where per capita arable land is below one mu (0.067 hectare), investors have to pay a land-use tax of 10 to 50 yuan per square meter (1.3 to 6.7 US dollars) compared with the previous two to ten yuan (27 cents to 1.35 US dollars).

Investors will only need to pay six to 30 yuan (81 cents to 4.05 US dollars) for each square meter they use if local per capita arable land range from two to three mu.

The lowest tax rates of five to 25 yuan (68 cents to 3.4 US dollars) will apply to where per capita arable land stands above three mu.

The State Administration of Taxation didn't identify the increment that the regulations may result in taxation revenue. But sources with the administration said that money would be mainly go to agriculture and farmers.

The ordinance also scrapped the previous "zero-tax" treatment for the construction of railways, airport runways and parking aprons and imposes a rate of two-yuan per square meter for such usage.

China's alert on inefficient land use and shrinking farm land was marked by a central government order to adopt the strictest management of land resources in 2004.

In mid-September, the Ministry of Land Resources (MLR) kicked off a 100-day campaign to crack down on local governments which illegally transfer householders' land to property developers.

On Wednesday, the MLR together with the Ministry of Finance and the People's Bank of China jointly issued a circular, requiring local governments to track land supply in a systematic and regular manner so as to improve a land reserve system amid intense concerns over a 9.5 per cent year-on-year housing price rise in 70 major cities this October. (XNA, 6 Dec 07)

Beijing, Dec. 11 (Xinhua) - China's State Council, or the cabinet, has announced regulations aimed at helping to enforce the country's new corporate income tax law.

Premier Wen Jiabao has signed a State Council order to approve the promulgation of the regulations which were published on 11 December.

The regulations, to take effect on Jan. 1, 2008, replace two earlier regulations promulgated by the government more than a decade ago.

It will be the first time since 1978 that China puts domestic and foreign firms on an equal footing in income taxation in an effort to promote fair competition. (XNA, 11 Dec 07)

BEIJING, Dec. 17 (Xinhua) - China announced a new regulation on military academy enrolment [as received] on 17 December to increase transparency and the quality of students.

The 13-chapter, 54-article document will come into effect on Jan. 1, said a statement issued by the People's Liberation Army (PLA).

"The regulation aims to make the enrolment procedure more transparent and open under effective supervision," the statement said.

Previously, there was a temporary regulation on the enrolment work that went into effect in 1995.

The new regulation included clear definitions on the standards and procedures the academies should follow when admitting students.

It would also impose more serious punishment on academies and officials who violated the rules. These included, for instance, officials who leaked exam papers and hackers who attacked the enrolment in the computer network.

The new regulation would help improve the overall quality of students, echoing President Hu Jintao's speech at the 17th National Congress of the Chinese Communist Party (CCP), the statement said.

"We will intensify our efforts to train a new type of high-calibre military personnel in large numbers and change the mode of generating combat capabilities," Hu said in his speech. (XNA, 17 Dec 07)
